Six teams. Six casts. One champion. One unforgettable night.

THE BIG PICTURE

Banana Ball is a fast-paced, highly competitive sport built around one central idea: fans first. What began with the Savannah Bananas has grown into the Banana Ball Championship League (BBCL), a six-team league blending high-level athleticism and real competition with entertainment, showmanship and fan interaction. And one important distinction: the games are real. Outcomes are not scripted or predetermined. Players compete to win, standings matter, and teams must earn their way to the championship.

The six BBCL teams include the following:

- Savannah Bananas
- Party Animals
- Firefighters
- Texas Tailgaters
- Indianapolis Clowns
- Loco Beach Coconuts

The competition is real: All six BBCL teams remained in the playoff fight into the final week of the regular season. The 2026 season also welcomed two new teams, the Loco Beach Coconuts and Indianapolis Clowns, as Banana Ball continued its evolution into a competitive six-team league.

WHAT MAKES BANANA BALL DIFFERENT?

Real competition. Players compete to win. Results aren't scripted, and the championship matchup will be determined through playoff competition. High-level athletes.

Banana Ball gives talented baseball players another opportunity to compete at a high level while challenging them to become entertainers, performers and fan favorites along the way. Fans are part of the game. Banana Ball's rules are designed around faster action, fewer interruptions and greater fan involvement — including the famous rule that a fan catching a foul ball counts as an out. Entertainment happens alongside competition. Trick plays, choreographed celebrations, walk-ups, dancing and entertainment are woven into the game without changing the fact that every team is trying to win. The Banana Bowl brings the entire league together on its biggest stage.
