Casey Trotter is an actor, musician and emerging triple-threat performer from Vancouver, Canada, quickly establishing himself as one of the most exciting young talents of his generation. At just 15 years old, he has already distinguished himself across both stage and screen through his exceptional musicianship, natural charisma, and commanding performances.

This summer, he will make his film debut starring in Disney's highly-anticipated original movie "Camp Rock 3" as Cliff, a drummer with his own beat. Throughout the sold-out 26-performance run, he captivated audiences with his virtuoso drumming, powerful vocals, and magnetic stage presence, earning widespread acclaim from audiences and industry professionals alike.

His breakout performance earned several notable honors, including the prestigious Aida Broadbent Award for Outstanding Performance and Professionalism, an Ovation Awards nomination for Outstanding Artistic Achievement, and a Youth Recognition Award for Excellence in Music and Performance.

In addition to his theatrical success, Trotter appeared on screen in The Thundermans. He splits his time between Los Angeles and Vancouver.
