John Salley
"Darius King"

No stranger to basketball, John Salley grew up playing in Brooklyn, New York and accepted a basketball scholarship at Georgia Tech where he played for the legendary Bobby Cremins. Salley then went to become a 15-year NBA legend and became the first NBA player to win four championships with three different teams.

In 2000, Salley retired from basketball and explored opportunities in both film and television. His film credits include "Bad Boys 1," "Bad Boys 2" and "Confessions of a Shopaholic."

On the television side, Salley served as the co-host of the Emmy nominated "The Best Damn Sports Show Period" for seven years. He has hosted shows, including the reunion of "Basketball Wives," "The Car Show," "The John Salley Block Party" radio show, and is now hosting his own talk-show "Game On!"

Salley's passion for film and television led him to create John Salley Presents Inc., his personal production company where he uses his uncanny ability to find unique individuals for film, television and the Internet.

Outside of work, Salley is involved with Operation Smile, PETA, the fight against Diabetes, and the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine where he has urged Congress to increase vegetarian options in schools across the country. Salley's main mission is to continue to educate people on the benefits of living a healthier lifestyle through better eating habits.

Salley currently resides in Los Angeles with his family.
