

Disney CHIP 'N' DALE Park Life

BIOGRAPHY

Marc du Pontavice
Executive Producer / Producer

Marc du Pontavice is executive producer and producer of Disney+'s animated laugh-out-loud series "Chip 'N' Dale: Park Life." The series follows nervous worrier Chip and laid-back dreamer Dale who are trying to live the good life in a big city park while having giant-sized, sky-high adventures.

du Pontavice is president of Xilam Animation, which over the past two decades has built up a catalog of over 2500 animated episodes that have been broadcast in more than 190 countries. With two Annecy festival awards and seven nominations, Xilam employs over 500 people, including 400 artists.

He began his career with Gaumont, where he co-founded Gaumont Television, supervising the production of a hundred hours of prime time fiction, including the "Highlander." He also created Gaumont Multimedia, whose assets he acquired in 1999 to found Xilam Animation.

Since that time, Xilam has established itself as one of the world's leaders in animation production, with several worldwide successes including "Oggy and the Cockroaches" and "Zig & Sharko," both executive produced by du Pontavice.

du Pontavice has also produced several feature and live action movies including "Gainsbourg: A Heroic Life," which received three César Awards. His animated feature credits include "I Lost My Body," which received two César Awards, an Annecy Cristal, and an Academy-Award nomination; "Space Goofs;" "Kaena: The Prophecy;" and "Go West! A Lucky Luke Adventure."

Born and raised in Paris, France, du Pontavice currently resides in Vincennes, France.
