

BIOGRAPHY

J Lee

"Lt. Cmdr. John Lamarr"

J Lee was born and raised in St. Louis, MO, where he began classical piano lessons at the age of three. He eventually went on to receive a music scholarship at Indiana University's renowned Jacob's School of Music. After graduating in 2005, with a B.A. in piano performance and theater and drama, he headed to Los Angeles.

His first job in the entertainment industry was as the receptionist for Seth MacFarlane's Family Guy. Working his way through the ranks, he went on to voice a character for the popular show, as well as ones for American Dad! and The Cleveland Show. He then began to write for The Cleveland Show, in addition to producing his short film, Naked Eye, starring the late Nelsan Ellis; and the documentary Battle for the Crown, about a group of fraternity brothers, as they prepare for the biggest step show of their lives.
