

BIOGRAPHY

TOM JENNINGS

Executive Producer and Director

Tom Jennings, an Emmy and Peabody Award-winning documentary filmmaker and journalist, is executive producer and director of National Geographic's "The Real Right Stuff," a two-hour companion documentary to the scripted series "The Right Stuff." The documentary begins streaming on Disney+ November 20.

Jennings has written, produced and directed more than 400 hours of programming on a variety of topics, including politics, religion, history, crime, sports, mystery and travel. He has produced documentary films all around the globe and has looked for new ways to tell stories that are informative and entertaining.

Jennings' body of work includes National Geographic Documentary Films' Apollo: Missions to the Moon (Producer's Guild of America Award winner); Diana: In Her Own Words; Challenger Disaster: Lost Tapes (Emmy Award winner, New York Film Festival Gold Medal and Royal Television Society nomination); The Lost JFK Tapes (Emmy Award nomination and New York Festival Silver Medal winner); and National Geographic's In Their Own Words three-part series (Narco Wars, Bernie Madoff and Deepwater Horizon). His other titles include The Fidel Castro Tapes (Emmy Award nomination); MLK: The Assassination Tapes (George Foster Peabody Award winner and Cine Golden Eagle Award winner); and Taking Down the Mob (New York Film Festival Bronze Medal winner).

Jennings started his career as a print journalist, writing for the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times and Associated Press, and in 1994 he was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize in journalism.