ERIC JUDOR (Fred)

Eric Judor is half of the comedy duo Eric and Ramzy, which he founded with Ramzy Bedia in 1994. Known for their dark and offbeat humor, the two became a huge hit on stage, on the radio, and on television two years later, with the series H, starring Djamel Debbouze. Starting in 2000, they starred in a string of films, such as the box office hit La Tour Montparnasse infernale, Gérard Pirès' French Spies, and Philippe Haïm's Lucky Luke and the Daltons, where Eric perfected his "big-hearted idiot" persona. After dubbing work on several movies, the duo created an animated series, Moot-Moot, and co-authored the quirky 2 Alone in Paris (2007), which they also co-directed. That same year, they starred in Quentin Dupieux's Steak.

Alongside his work with Ramzy, Eric wrote and directed the series Platane for Canal+, and starred in a number of films, including Quentin Dupieux's Wrong Cops, Arthur Benzaquen's The New Adventures of Aladdin, Julien Guetta's The Troubleshooter, and Lionel Steketee's Aladdin 2. He also directed the films La Tour 2 contrôle infernale (2016) and Problemos (2017). In 2019, he voiced Mr. Link in Metropolitan's animated feature Missing Link, and directed the third season of Platane. The following year, he starred in Jean-Pascal Zadi's Simply Black and was a guest on season 2 of Zadi's Carrément craignos. In 2021, he starred in the Netflix comedy The Last Mercenary.
